

Bullying

This federal government website is managed by U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The site provides one page descriptions on what is bullying, cyber bullying, who is at risk, preventing and responding to bullying and ways to get immediate help.

<http://www.stopbullying.gov/index.html>

Of potential interest to the CASA is “KID” link, which describes facts about bullying and what the kid can do. Also included are webisodes, which the CASA could watch with their foster child as a point of discussion. Targeted audiences grades 4th and above.

<http://www.stopbullying.gov/kids/index.html>

The Parent Advocacy Coalition sponsors this site for Educational Rights (PACER).

<http://www.pacer.org/bullying/>

The Resources link (<http://www.pacer.org/bullying/resources/info-facts.asp>) provides bullying info and facts for parents.

In addition, under the Information Handouts link

(<http://www.pacer.org/bullying/resources/publications/>) there are a number of pdf files, which the CASA might find helpful. Examples include template letters to notify school about bullying and instructions on how to talk to a child about bullying,

This is an educational site designed by and for elementary school students to learn about bullying prevention, engage in activities, and be inspired to take action.

<http://www.pacerkidsagainstabullying.org/>

This site was created by and for teens, it’s a place for middle and high school students to find ways to address bullying, to take action, to be heard, and to join an important social cause. <http://www.pacerteensagainstabullying.org/>

This site offers different kinds of information on bullying. The categories include: Introduction to Bullying Prevention, Anti-Bullying Efforts Target Parents and Educators, Bullying Victims Use Stories for Advocacy, and Bullying Resources.

<http://www.safestartcenter.org/resources/bullying-prevention.php>

This site offers a background of bullying and provides the audience with statistics. The statistics are broken down between males and females and the type of behavior being done. The site covers negative effects, legislative response, defining bullying, and more.

<http://www.ncsl.org/issues-research/human-services/tackling-the-schoolyard-bullying-combining-policy-ma.aspx>

This site lets you browse various articles on the topic of bullying. The site will tell you the title, author, type, date, and how many words are in the article.

http://www.thefreelibrary.com/_/search/Search.aspx?SearchBy=0&Word=bullying&By=0

This site offers a research blog along with cyberbullying headlines. There is also a column on the left that has different buzz words that you can click and it will send you to more articles and information on the buzzword.

<http://cyberbullying.us/blog/tag/schools>